3CR/6WKS

This course is designed to introduce historical, legal, and theoretical frameworks of education for English language learners in the United States. Participants identify effective English language learner instructional approaches and strategies with emphasis on content area instruction. Evaluation and assessment strategies for English language learners are also addressed.

TESOL/504: Instructional Techniques and Methods

3CR/6WKS

This course provides educators with an overview of techniques and methods that support the instruction of English language learners. Participants examine culturally responsive practices for instruction and assessment. Teaching in the content areas, honoring cultural diversity, and involving parents/guardians and community are also explored.

TESOL/505: Assessment

3CR/6WKS

This course provides educators with a foundational understanding of assessment practices for English language learners. Participants examine the relationship between language acquisition and assessment and its effect on teaching and learning. Content area instruction, reading instruction, and writing instruction as they relate to assessment areas are also explored.

TESOL/506: Overview of Linguistics

3CR/6WKS

This course is designed to introduce K–12 educators to the study of the nature, structure, development, and acquisition of language. Participants explore the integration of theory into practice, teaching methods, cultural implications of language, and first- and second-language acquisition. Particular emphasis is given to psycholinguistics, sociolinguistics, communication, and assessment.

TESOL/507: School, Community and Family Culture

3CR/6WKS

This course is designed to examine multicultural education in the classroom, in the community, and globally. The primary focus is to provide participants with an understanding and appreciation of the beliefs, customs, and traditions of diverse cultures. Participants integrate multicultural curriculum featuring a variety of instructional strategies for English language learners that promote culturally responsive teaching.

TESOL/508: Teaching Reading & Writing

3CR/6WKS

This course provides educators with a foundational awareness and understanding of best practices for teaching reading and writing to English language learners. Language acquisition and literacy development as it relates to teaching reading and writing is explored. Participants create reading and writing instruction and assessment for integration across the curriculum.
