

00:00

Music

00:05

My hope for the future is to continue giving back to the community and making it statewide, worldwide, I want to make a difference all over the world.

00:10

00:18

I met Dominick when there was a tragic shooting of three children here in

00:28

Albuquerque. I had went to the school. I was doing a vigil. I believe it was the principal who told me that Dominick had went to the school and was talking to the children about violence and stuff like that. Trying to help them cope with the loss of their three schoolmates. I came to find out that he opened in power, which is great, I guess it lied dormant for about ten years. He reopened that and

00:33

00:38

00:42

00:49

00:55

he's been out there fighting against bullying, which in today's day, in schools

01:00

we really need people like that. He went up to the Roundhouse for a group name

01:07

ROBD, repeat offenders bring devastation. He went and spoke up there to help some more laws get passed. He also went with me here in Albuquerque, we had our fifth annual march against child abuse last April.

01:11

01:16

01:21

So he went and he spoke against bullying there also. I also feed the homeless on 01:28

Saturdays. I go out and I help a couple of different groups feed the homeless and gather things and I've also met Dominick along the way there. He gathers

01:31

01:37

up toiletries and he goes out and he helps other groups feed the homeless,

01:42

takes his own personal time. I'm gonna actually be collaborating with a new store that just opened. They just did a Joy Junction and he asked me if I wanted to collaborate and with him and so we can make you big. I don't see him stopping what he's doing. Dominick has, going to bring tears to my eyes, he has this huge

01:48

01:53

01:57

02:04

heart inside of him and helping others you know I think is his passion